Linde and Ed Johnson wantonly, intentionally and maliciously killed William Cook with pistols, and that the other defendants aided in and promoted said killing.

RETURNED TO LIFE.
Alabama Woman Soon Expired, However, and the Services Were Continued.

Huntsville, Ala., April 19.—There was great excitement in Dallas, Ala., today while the funeral of Mrs. Frank Marlow was being conducted. Suddenly those in attendance were horrified to see the corpse which was lying in plain view of the many mourners give a gasp and show every sign of returning life. The body became warm and her pulse began to beat feebly. Physicians were hurriedly summoned; but the woman died, in an hour and the funeral was continued. The physicians say in their report of the peculiar case that Mrs. Marlow was in a trance, but that death came at the time above mentioned.

One thing is noticeable in reference to all the candidates for county office—every one of the nominees lives in Madisonville. Not a single candidate from the country was named as a standard bearer in any of the contests.

When a man can make ready for a journey in five minutes he probably has a wife and daughter rushing around getting his things together.

THE VACANT CHAIR.
When the little family circle is broken and we sit sadly looking upon the vacant chair, we think of the things that perhaps we might have done to keep the loved one with us. Why not think of these things now before it is too late? Is it a kind, loving and hard-working mother who is giving all her strength and efforts for the family well-being and happiness? Is it a delicate, fragile sister, or a weak and ailing wife? Try to give her the tender care she needs. Do not let her fade away for want of earnest effort to preserve and restore her.
An Ohio lady, Mrs. Shophire, living in Ballou, Shelby Co., in a thoughtful letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "My mother had an ovarian tumor which we thought would result in her death, but we commenced using your favorite 'Prescription' and before she had taken three bottles she began to improve; she is living today and we have given your medicine the credit. My mother was sixty-six years old when the tumor commenced to grow; she is seventy-six now and the tumor is all gone. She had gotten awful large, and her limbs began to swell before she began to use your medicine. I value it so much that I am hardly ever out of it in my house."
This is but one of many thousands of instances in which this matchless "Prescription" has restored such complete health and purification to the distinctly feminine organism as to dispel every possible trace of abnormal or dangerous conditions without resort to surgery or similar obnoxious methods. For every form of female weakness and disease it is the supreme specific designed for this one purpose and no other by an educated skillful physician of extraordinary experience in this particular field of practice.

He was first stricken with the disease about one year ago, and last week suffered a second stroke, from which he never rallied.

SERIOUS CRIME.
Prominent Webster County Farmer Accused of Assaulting a Neighbor's Wife.

Madisonville, Ky., April 20.—J. D. Wallace, a prominent farmer of Webster county, is charged with criminally assaulting Mrs. Ed Dockery, the wife of a well-known young farmer in the neighborhood. Wallace was taken to Providence and held under $500 bond till Monday, when he will have his examining trial before Squire Baker.

ELK'S CARNIVAL
Street Fair And Midway May 20-25, 1901.

The Elks of Owensboro, Ky., will hold the first street fair ever given in this part of the state for one week, commencing Monday, May 20. There will be a monster display of exhibits of every kind. Over 600 feet of booth space has been sold up to this time. The finest attractions that money can get have been secured. Among the headliners are Archille Phillion, the spiral globe performer, and the Thompsons, who make a head-first dive from a tower ninety feet high into a four-foot tank of water. There will be large parades each day of the fair. In fact, something will be doing every minute to amuse the people.
That Everybody's Magazine is a periodical to be seriously reckoned with is the opinion of the men who make and sell Monthlies. Many kind things were said of the April issue, but the May number is even better. It is readable from cover to cover. Admirably written and finely illustrated it is comparable with its most expensive competitors rather than with the rest of the tawdry publications. The best artists are engaged on its pictures; the ablest writers contribute its articles and stories.

LAW FOR NOTHING.

Free Legal Help in New York for Ten Thousand People Annually.
Law for nothing—free advice, unpaid protection against robbery of the poor by the unscrupulous, rich—is given every year in New York—thousands of dollars' worth. Twice as much charity of this sort was distributed during 1900 as in any previous year, says the New York World.

Relief was given in 14,365 cases last year, as compared with 9,436 in 1899 and 5,602 in 1898. Poor people often need legal aid as much as food or clothing when a lawyer's fee is beyond their means. The Legal Aid society, which superintends the charity, has just completed its twenty-fifth year.

The work of the society has been extended recently to the heart of the red-light district of the East side. The society's attorney, Carl L. Schurz, in a recent report attaches especial importance to the new branch. There are thousands of families living in this district, poor but honest, who are the prey of all sorts of dishonest traders and even of the police. Many of them are foreigners and are adapting themselves to the new conditions slowly. The number of applications for relief in this section is greater than anywhere else in the city.

The most common complaint received was for arrears of wages. There were 6,331 of these. There were 499 applications to recover property, 369 for breach of contract and 336 for damages for personal injuries. A great many applications were made by sailors. These were directed against dishonest landlords to obtain salvage and prize money and against attempted shanghaiing.

Practically every nation in the world was represented among the applicants. Of the 14,000-odd complaints, 3,349 were from natives of the United States, 2,948 from Germans, 2,255 from Russians, 1,189 Austrians, 865 Englishmen, 602 Norwegians and Swedes. The Irish numbered but 576.

THE JEWISH TEMPLE.

Earthquake Prevented Julian the Apostate from Rebuilding It.
Julian the Apostate, to disprove the prophecy of Christ, attempted to rebuild the Temple of Jerusalem. In that work, says the Woman's Home Companion, he summoned to his aid the dispersed Jews, who responded eagerly with their labor and wealth. Those long and sorely oppressed people were sure that the restoration was at last to be brought about, and they entered upon the project with the greatest enthusiasm. Even women gave their jewelry toward defraying the cost, and it is said they worked, carrying earth in their silken dresses. However, the work had not progressed far when a terrible earthquake completely demolished the foundation. Balls of fire burst from the ground, killing many workmen; and it is asserted that a mighty flaming cross surrounded by a circle appeared in the sky. Their tools were melted by lightning, and one writer goes so far as to say that the bodies of the workmen were marked with a cross which it was impossible to efface. How much of this story is fabulous and how much the truth it is hard to say. However, an earthquake undoubtedly did destroy the new foundation of the temple. The Mohammedan mosque of Omar now stands on the site.

BOTH BRAVE AND GENEROUS.

How Question Raised by an Old Legacy Was Settled.
A legacy of £500 was left by Rev. Mr. Narcross to the bravest man in England. To determine to whom it should go, says the Women's Home Companion, the executors applied to the duke of Wellington for advice. The duke said that the battle of Waterloo was undoubtedly one of the greatest battles ever fought by the English, and that success depended upon closing the gates of Hougoumont. That Sir James Macdonnell saw that fact, sprang forward, and in the very nick of time closed them with the greatest gallantry, and he was therefore of the opinion that the legacy should go to him. When Sir James was offered the money he said: "I cannot claim all the credit for closing the gates of Hougoumont. My sergeant, John Graham, seeing the importance of the step at the moment that I did, rushed forward and aided me, and by your leave I will share the legacy with him." His request was granted.

The World's Death Rate.

The death rate of the world is 67 and the birth rate 70 a minute, and this seemingly light percentage of gain is sufficient to give a net increase in population each year of 1,200,000.

KING EDWARD VII.
A Cyclist and Lord Salisbury is Also a Wheelman.

There need be no more conclusive evidence that the bicycle is again becoming fashionable than the fact that King Edward VII. has taken to wheeling. For the past decade England's ruler has originated thousands of world famous fads, but he has inaugurated nothing which is bound to be copied with more universal zest than bicycle riding. For the past dozen years or more the Royal Edward has been gradually merging toward corpulency, and has tried as a preventative every conceivable form of outdoor exercise, but with little satisfaction. He devoted a goodly spell each day to private indulgence in fencing, driving, walking and riding, but has derived greater benefit from cycling than from all other kindred sports.

Every day the King may be seen spinning along on his wheel in the private grounds surrounding Marlborough House, and seems to be perfectly at ease on his bicycle. One of the most notable men in England to emulate the King is Lord Salisbury. He has become an ardent wheelman, and the aged Premier has received permission from the King to ride in the Royal enclosure at Marlborough House. Lord Salisbury is usually attended on his rides by his daughter, Lady Cecil. With such people to lead the way in matters of taste, the bicycle is bound to regain its hold among the people of fashion.

It is folly to attempt to please everybody. It matters not in which direction a man faces he must of necessity turn his back on half the world.

Poultry On the Farm.

On most farms the hen is very much abused and neglected. Cows, horses, sheep and swine are well housed, well fed—but the hen, supposed to be an unprofitable thing, very insignificant in the eyes of most farmers—is allowed to shift for herself, roosting in sheds, on farm implements or in the trees. If a house is furnished, it is generally cold, full of cracks, filthy and full of vermin, and no windows or means of letting in sunshine. Once a year when it becomes necessary, the farmer will take time—much against his will—to clean out the poultry house, but he knows little or nothing about whitewash or coal oil. The hens lay well for a time in spring and summer, but many of the eggs are laid away under barns or outhouses and set on and spoiled, or chicks are hatched from them only to be gobbled up by rats, skunks, pigs or hawks, or dragged around in the wet grass mornings until they disappear. Very few are raised to maturity to take the place of the old hens. No one takes any interest in ages of fowls, some may be ten years old and worthless, but they are consumers just the same. No wonder farmers say, "Hens don't pay." How could they? Would his cows pay if neglected as the hens are? A hen is a machine the same as a cow and they must be fed liberally before they will produce. You can not make something out of nothing, and hens can not make eggs out of wind or snowballs. In the summer the hen fares well, as she has range of fields, but the profits are neglected. Eggs are laid away in fields or under barns, and wasted.

How different where some member of the family takes an interest in the "chickens." Money is saved up to build a small, cheap but comfortable house with windows toward the south. The roosts are built low and level, with dropping boards beneath—not poles built like a stairway, where the fowls crowd on the highest pole and fight and injure each other. Comfortable nest boxes are provided, the walls are whitewashed, roosts kept coaloiled, droppings kept cleaned out at least every week or so. Soft feed is given in the morning, good wheat, oats or barley at night. Plenty of clean fresh water is provided at all times. The eggs are gathered each day and sold as fresh as possible. The fowls are kept clean and healthy, and they pay. They will always pay with good care—ordinary good care! Houses don't need to be expensive or fancy, just plain, convenient, comfortable houses. Shiftless, lazy people will not succeed and make hens pay a profit—profit means work, a good deal of attention and study, but it also means dollars. Farmers are awakening to the fact that poultry pays. It was hard to convince them of that some years ago—for a long time they considered the hen beneath their notice, but when the hard times of 1893 began and grain dropped away down and money was very scarce and panic reigned supreme, then they began to turn their attention to poultry. They found they could sell their grain at a fine profit by feeding it to poultry and selling eggs and chickens on the market.

There was never as much profit in poultry in America as there is to-day. Twenty years ago wheat was $1 and up per bushel, and other grains in proportion. Eggs were no higher, nor as high as they are to-day. To-day grain is away down and eggs and poultry are up—see the profit?—Thos. H. MILLS, in Inland Poultry.

Enteritis in Fowls.

More attention has been given to this disease the past few months than ever before. It bears the same relation to diarrhoea that roup does to catarrh. It is a severe diarrhoea aggravated, if not caused, by improper feeding, violent purgatives, foreign substances, poisons, or following a mild attack of diarrhoea or dysentery. Unlike cholera, it is not infectious. If a large number are sick with enteritis it is because they have been exposed to the same causes. Enteritis is an inflammatory disease of the small intestine, in mild cases including only the mucous membrane—but in severe attacks extending to all the layers of the bowel.

It is caused by feeding too stimulating or irritant foods; poisonous vegetable or mineral; large numbers of worms in bowel; in fact by anything that irritates or inflames the bowels. There are three sources of danger from poisons on many farms—Paris green, paint, and unslaked lime. Paris green, when it first began to be used, was carefully protected and used with discretion, but of late years it may be seen just where it was most convenient to drop the box, and the pails are left in some fence corner until wanted again, letting the rain gather in them, proving the cause of many an attack of "bowel trouble." Paint pots and cans are thought to be harmless; if not, why are they left lying around in fields for years? Drinking the water that collects in these vessels has led to enteritis in hundreds of cases. Unslaked lime is understood by nearly everyone to be a dangerous substance to be swallowed by a bird, and it is fairly well taken care of. Its usual way of producing trouble is by being picked up from droppings board or house floor where slacked lime is used to "sweeten" the place. If the lime is not screened there are often many pieces as large as corn kernels that remain in the lime unslaked. These little lumps combine with the water of the crop and bowel, producing great heat and irritation.

SYMPTOMS.—Great general weakness. Bird gets into a corner, sits down in a listless manner, with feathers ruffled. Eyes are nearly closed. The bird is seen to shiver, and is restless. The bird is hot—in fact, there is general fever. The discharges are watery, with mucus stringy matter, and sometimes yellow with bile. Blood may be passed with the discharge, and is usually followed by death. It is quite common for fatal cases to show stupor or wildness when well advanced in the disease.

TREATMENT.—Seek the cause; if possible, remove it. If due to an irritant in the bowel, give a teaspoonful of castor oil to remove it; follow with bland liquids, such as flour porridge, boiled milk, rice water. The best foods are meat extracts, raw meat, Murdock's food. If constipation is observed to be present part of the time, give injections of warm milk and water, or warm castor oil. If enteritis is caused by worms they should be removed by remedies, as given in "Worms."

In all cases add to one quart drinking water one level teaspoonful sulpho-carbolate of zinc. Boiled water is best.

Do not give violent cathartics in any case of diarrhoea, as they simply increase the irritation.

Do not give solid food or grit for several days. As the bird improves bread and milk is to be given, followed in a week by well cooked mash.—Farm-Poultry Doctor.

121 Generations Since Adam's Time.

Alfred Judson Fisher, the Chicago historian, has woven the highly interesting results of a genealogical investigation into "A Daughter of Adam," a short story which he has written for the Ladies' Home Journal. He traces the heroine of his romance (in real life a well-known Philadelphia woman) directly back to Adam, establishing with corroborative detail every link in the long genealogical chain. He brings to light the fact that there have been one hundred and twenty-one generations of the human family, beginning with Adam.

Beware of Ointments For Catarrh That Contain Mercury

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. See articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. No Garden is Complete Without Dahlias.

No garden can be considered complete nowadays unless it contains a collection of dahlias. The newer kinds bloom in mid-summer and are in all ways more desirable than the old, large, very double sorts, whose chief merit is richness of color. To grow these plants well you must give them a rich, deep soil, and keep it moist at all times. By covering the plants when the September frosts are here they can be kept from injury and the season of bloom extended for weeks—until the coming of really cold weather, in fact.—Eben E. Rexford, in the May Ladies' Home Journal.

A Testimonial from Old England.

"I consider Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the best in the world for bronchitis," says Mr. William Savory, of Warrington, England. "It has saved my wife's life, she having been a martyr to bronchitis for over six years, being most of the time confined to her bed. She is now quite well." It is a great pleasure to the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to be able to publish testimonials of this character. They show that great good is being done, pain and suffering relieved and valuable lives restored to health and happiness by this remedy. It is for sale by all druggists.

Parsons & Co., druggists of this place, to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. They recommended it so highly that I bought a bottle. I was soon relieved of all pain. I have since recommended this liniment to many of my friends, who agree with me that it is the best remedy for muscular rheumatism in the market." For sale by all druggists.

YOUNG BUT COMPETENT.

Career of Milton E. Ailes, the New Assistant Secretary of the United States Treasury.

Milton E. Ailes, of Ohio, our new assistant secretary of the treasury, is probably the youngest man who ever held an assistant secretaryship in the government departments at Washington. The confidence placed in him by superior officials was won by 14 years of diligent work, close application and untiring energy.

When barely 20 years old he entered the government service in an obscure position in the internal revenue bureau. He has since passed through all grades of the civil service, having filled each office with credit.

MILTON E. AILES
(Recently Appointed Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.)

Shortly after his first appointment in the treasury department he began the study of law, was admitted to the bar in 1891 and within a few months was invited to become law clerk of the miscellaneous division. After winning high esteem in that capacity he was called to a desk in the customs bureau, where he served several years. His next advancement occurred in the early part of President McKinley's first term, when he was appointed private secretary to Assistant Secretary Wike. His executive ability soon won the attention of Secretary Gage, and when Mr. Vanderlip was made assistant secretary Mr. Ailes was named for his successor, as private secretary to the secretary of the treasury.

He is a devoted student of finance, and has contributed notable articles on the subject to various newspapers and magazines. Financiers having dealings with Secretary Gage and the department found Mr. Ailes a bright, responsible intermediary. His valuable work in this capacity insured his prompt promotion to the office of assistant secretary of the treasury, made vacant by Mr. Vanderlip's resignation. Mr. Ailes has represented the department on several important commissions, both in the United States and abroad. He is a graduate of the law department of the National university, of Washington; a member of the National Geographical society and secretary of the New Washington Economic society.

KINDERGARTEN IN CUBA.

Good Work Done by the Cuban Orphan Society. Under the supervision of Gen. Greene.

The second annual report of the Cuban Orphan society, of which Gen. Francis V. Greene is president, has just been made public. For the first year of its existence the work of the society was all in the direction of relief. Then, early in 1900, the government of the island took the relief work off its hands and left the socety to take up educational work along kindergarten and manual training lines. At the present time the society maintains free kindergartens for destitute children and small manual training schools in Santa Maria del Rosario, Matanzas, Guantanamo and Sagua la Grande. It is teaching 150 boys and 30 girls manual training; has 145 children in its kindergartens; has organized 100 poor widows into sewing clubs; has established English classes in some of the public schools, and is teaching 40 public school teachers the principles and methods of kindergarten work so that they may apply them in the public schools. Miss Laura D. Gill, who has had personal charge of the work since its beginning, has been elected dean of Barnard college and will consequently terminate her work for the society this spring.

Sportsmen Want Cats Taxed.
A tax on cats is the latest scheme of the French sportsmen, who are about to present to the chamber of deputies a petition calling for such impost. The tax, they say, would diminish the number of undesirable cats which play havoc with small birds and game.

NERVOUSNESS OF WOMEN.

What Peruna Has Done For a Brilliant Actress.

MISS JULIA MARLOWE.

In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., Miss Julia Marlowe of New York City, has the following to say of Peruna:

"I am glad to write my endorsement of the great remedy, Peruna, as a nerve tonic. I do so most heartily."
Julia Marlowe.

Nervousness is very common among women. This condition is due to anemic nerve centers. The nerve centers are the reservoirs of nervous vitality. These centers become bloodless for want of proper nutrition. This is especially true in the spring season. Every spring a host of invalids are produced as the direct result of weak nerves.

This could be easily obviated by the use of Peruna. Peruna strikes at the root of the difficulty by correcting the digestion. Digestion furnishes nutrition for the nerve centers. Properly digested food furnishes these reservoirs of life with vitality which leads to strong, steady nerves, and thus nourishes life.

Peruna is in great favor among women, especially those who have vocations that are trying to the nervous system. Peruna furnishes the lasting invigoration for the nerves that such people so much need. Thousands of testimonials from women in all parts of the United States are being received every year. Such unsolicited evidence surely proves that Peruna is without an equal as a nerve tonic and vital invigorator.

Buy a bottle of Peruna to-day. If you do not receive all the benefits from Peruna that you expected, write to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio.

BELGIAN HARES.

Company Formed for Raising
Them in Hopkinsville On a Large Scale.

A few business and professional men met at the office of First National Bank Monday night, and formed a company for the raising and selling of Belgian Hares. It will probably be the largest concern of its kind in the State. Hutches and pens will be built to accommodate 1500 to 2000, and the selling capacity of the company after twelve months will be probably 200 Hares per month.

Prof. A. C. Kuykendall, of South Kentucky College, was elected president and Thos. W. Long secretary and treasurer. The officers have already begun correspondence looking to the purchase of the finest imported and pedigreed stock. Some one of the company will soon visit some of the leading rabbitries for the purpose of making select purchases and studying the business. The Belgian hare business is one of the largest live stock interests in the United States.

These Hares sell to the butchers in the larger cities at an average of $1.00 each and to fanciers at prices ranging according to the perfection of the individual from $2 to $2500.00. Some Belgian Hare companies are capitalized as high as $200,000.00 and have capacities for several thousand Hares per month. The demand for them is enormous.

One of my milliners was taking Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a severe cold at that time, which seemed to relieve her so quickly that I bought some for myself. It acted like magic and I began to improve at once. I am now entirely well and feel very pleased to acknowledge its merits." For sale by all druggists.

LIVING IN SIAM.

What Are Necessities in America Are Luxuries There.

One who has never been outside of the United States can hardly form in his imagination a picture of what living means to the plain people in Siam. The price of furniture, such as one finds in the home of the laboring man in America, runs about as follows: Chair, from 90 cents to three dollars; bedstead, nine dollars to $15; mattress, $4.50 to nine dollars; dining table, six to ten dollars. The laborer with wages from 15 to 30 cents a day sits upon the floor in his home, sleeps upon a grass mat, cooks on a box of earth or an earthen crock for a stove, and eats his rice, fish and simple vegetables out of the same dish with his family, without fork or knife or spoon. Eggs, which are very cheap, he has at times; chicken on rare occasions, and I think I am safe in saying that beef is almost unknown in the common laborer's meal.

His house is a bamboo structure with a tap roof, and generally consists of one small room about ten feet square, which is sometimes divided by a low partition. Within these rough walls and on a floor of rough boards or split bamboo, he and his wife and his family eat and cook and sleep. The clothing of himself and family is the most meager; a cloth around the loins—the woman generally wears a cloth around her breast also—no shoes, seldom a covering for the head, holiday and working day alike. The more fortunate on festive occasions may indulge in a piece of bright-colored cotton cloth thrown about their shoulders.

It is not necessary to say that, in connection with such an existence, the terms library and school and church and comforts are out of place. While the Siamese bathe more frequently than other people, and to all outward appearance are the most cleanly of persons, the contracted and meager condition of the poor man's home renders it most filthy and unsanitary. Nature is most kind in this tropical climate, and yet, with all her gentleness, the death rate among the poor is enormous.

NEW YORK'S RESTAURANTS.

All Nationalities Represented—As Good as a Trip Abroad.

You can order a dinner in New York in a dozen different languages.

Every foreign tongue has a restaurant of its own, with its native dishes, cooks and waiters.

There is no better time to study the foreign element in New York than while he eats, says the World. The dishes may not agree with you, but a visit to those quaint dining-rooms will well repay the effort.

Everybody knows the French restaurants. They are so well patronized that they are fast losing their foreign flavor. It is difficult to find one nowadays which is not more or less Americanized. The original cafes in New York where small, low-ceiled rooms, where everyone spoke French and which soon became dense with tobacco smoke. The custom of following the dinner with an impromptu concert to which any guest was at liberty to contribute is a thing of the past.

Chinatown remains intensely Chinese. A number of so-called Chinese restaurants with American furniture, American cooks and electric lights are to be found uptown, but one must still go to Chinatown to get Chinese dinners.

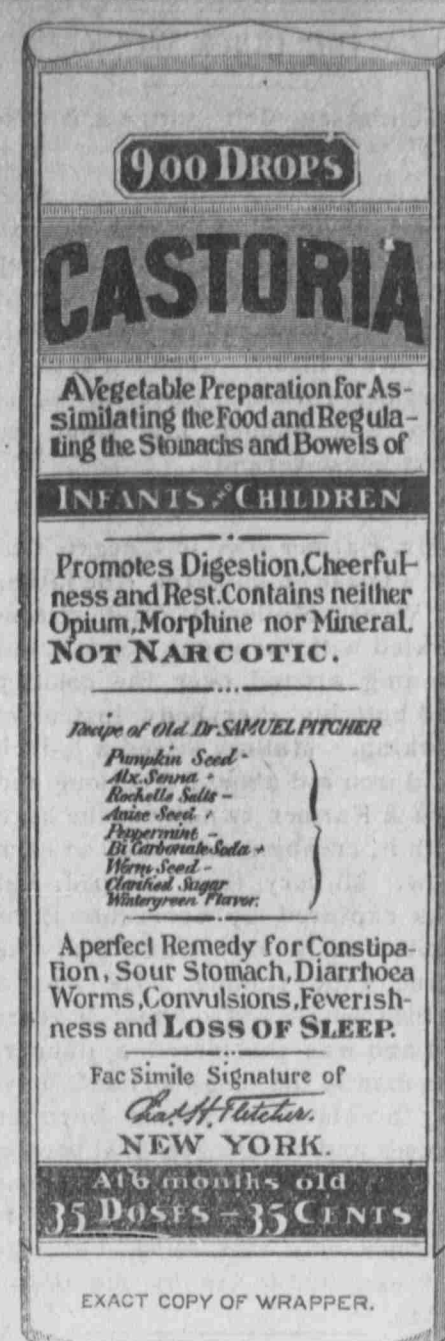

The Greek restaurants are seldom visited by any but Greeks. There you will find dishes incomprehensible to the American eye and stomach. No other nation can serve their food.

The Turkish and the Spanish restaurants are equally unfamiliar. The food to be found in both is much too fiery and highly seasoned for the American palate.

The German restaurant seems to meet with most favor in New York. The Vienna cafes are so familiar as to have lost much of the charm of novelty. It is the same with the English chop house. The Italian restaurant, especially of the cheaper class, still remains picturesque and characteristic.

Importance of Letters.

To those who have never considered the subject it might appear that each letter is of equal importance in the formation of words; but the relative proportions required in the English language are these: a, 85; b, 16; c, 30; d, 44; e, 120; f, 25; g, 17; h, 64; i, 80; j, 4; k, 8; l, 40; m, 30; n, 80; o, 80; p, 17; q, 5; r, 62; s, 80; t, 90; u, 34; v, 12; w, 20; x, 4; y, 20; z, 2. It is this knowledge of how frequently one letter is used compared with others that enables cryptogram readers to unravel so many mysteries.

MADE QUICK WORK.

A Tennessee Mob Hangs a Negro at Springfield.

Springfield, Tenn., April 23.—At 9 o'clock to-night a mob of about 100 broke into the court-house and forcibly took the negro Wyatt Mallory, who fatally wounded J. C. H. Farmer, of Adams, yesterday afternoon, and hanged him from the court-house veranda.

Details of Mallory's Deed.

Mr. Farmer was in a negro tenant's house on his farm (the father of Wyatt Mallory,) and remonstrated with the young negro about running around over the country and bullying everybody instead of working. Mallory seized a 3/4-inch solid iron rod about 3 feet long and struck Farmer twice over the head with it, crushing his skull at each blow. Mallory then escaped, but was captured by Constable Boyd Smith early last night near the scene of the trouble. He was a rather small negro about 21 years old and was considered a dangerous man in the neighborhood, having threatened to kill and burn the houses and barns of several people. A telephone message from Adams late this evening said that Mr. Farmer was still alive, but was not expected to live by the physicians.

LIZZIE JARRETT,

A Colored Woman Attempted to Hang Herself.

Lizzie Jarrett, a negro woman who was sentenced to serve a term in the workhouse, made an attempt to commit suicide Wednesday. She was arraigned for striking a negro boy with a rock and while waiting for the case to be called raised such a disturbance in the police court that she had to be removed. She was later given a thirty days sentence. It was necessary to handcuff her to get her back to the lock-up. After being locked up she made a rope out of her apron strings and hanged herself to a bar in the cell door and when discovered was nearly dead from strangulation. She was cut down and as soon as she recovered sufficiently made a second attempt and was again rescued. Later in the day a third attempt was almost successful and it required hard work by a physician to bring her around alive. She was then taken to the workhouse.

About a year ago the woman set fire to her clothes but when she began to burn called for help and a hose was turned on her. She was horribly burned but got well.

She is about 40 years old and a tough character.
